MOOD: 😬 intimidated

MUSIC: Tom Waits - I Know I Been Changed

Holy cow, Batfriends. Remember this conversation? As of, oh, yesterday? (<http://cvillette.livejournal.com/14365.html?thread=140317#t140317>).

Would you believe I think I just Met A Girl? I mean, not like seriously Met A Girl.

But I have a date. At least, I think it's a date. I'm pretty sure it's a date.

Tonight.

Pre-emptively, before the ~~seagulls~~ my friends descend, her name is Amarilis, she works for the W.H.O., she's another regular at the Puerto Rican place on the corner, and she's maybe 28, 29? I've seen here there before.

I went down to pick up my takeout order and she broke a heel coming out as I was going in (I was holding the door) and I kind of, er, caught her before she could faceplant on the sidewalk. (The sopa de huevo y limón was not so lucky.)

Anyway, she bought me coffee. And before I was really sure what was going on, there were dinner-and-a-movie plans. Nightmare Before Christmas. In 3D.

...her choice.

Oh, gawd, this only happens in Meg Ryan movies, doesn't it? I mean seriously, with the meet cute and the common interests and the whole thing?

....OMG, somebody come fix my hair and dress me!!!!!!

This highly observant profiler makes note of the fact that the UnSub wears heels. Possibly still dressed up from church, which would suggest a conservative religious background (Unitarians wear Birkenstocks and running shoes). Or possibly a generally dressy individual. Since the Victim is not the GQ sort, what conclusions can we draw from this?

As a fellow Highly Observant Profiler, may I suggest that the UnSub, given her name--Amarilis--and location--a Puerto Rican takeout joint--I'm going to take a wild guess and say, Catholic. Which means she probably just came from Sunday morning Mass.

Hmm. How late do you think he'll be out?

And should we call his cellphone and make sure she's not making improper advances?

Oh, gawd, if he doesn't have his cellphone turned OFF, I'm going to lose all hope for him.

Let's see: Catholic girl who dresses up for Mass. Put that in the "slow advance" category. BUT! Invites guy out for coffee and schedules first date for the same night--relatively fast lane.

Based on hundreds of custodial interviews ~~and a lot of issues of Cosmo~~ I'd say, he'll be home before midnight. But dizzy.

Well, having dated a couple of Catholic boys, they can be deceptive. I presume the female of the species might follow the same pattern.

I do note that the UnSub appears unflustered by losing her lunch (literally) all over a target of opportunity, and is capable of taking advantage of an unscheduled, unforeseen diversion to draw out her prey. She's clever, opportunistic, highly organized but not compulsive.

Having checked movie times in the vicinity, it looks as if the best available showing of The Nightmare Before Christmas (in 3d) is at 7 pm. Even assuming coffee or drinks afterwards, I suspect chances are that the Victim will be home by eleven.

And not speaking to us.

76-minute movie, so you know.

For next time.

Of course, the alternate theory, that the UnSub is a generally dressy individual, leads us to other interesting and possibly fruitful lines of speculation. Having observed the Victim's general appearance on Sunday afternoons after doing laundry, I think we can make the following generalizations.

- 1) Possibly, the UnSub has been observing the Victim for some time, and knows that this is not characteristic of his usual appearance.
- 2) Possibly, the UnSub was so dazzled by the Victim's quick thinking that she made an offer of coffee in thanks, and once they got talking, it turns out she's secretly a huge Babylon 5 geek, and was unwilling to let a possibly quick-thinking geek with good hygiene and a possibly Hispanic background escape her clutches so easily. (Wait until she tries talking Spanish to him.)
- 3) He smiled one of those cute shy Chaz smiles at her and she momentarily took leave of her senses.
- 4) She's in the market for a hatrack.

Curse you, Agent Wabbit--I thought we were ready to give the profile. These are all reasonable alternate hypotheses.

Oh, except the Bab 5 one. I really think the profile to date suggests the UnSub wouldn't have a taste for long bombastic monologues. After all, the Victim probably ceased to speak in complete or intelligible sentences as soon as she invited him for coffee.

The hatrack possibility seems especially worth following up on.

Maybe she likes rough trade.

Okay. Scruffy trade.

In which case, we may not hear from him until Tuesday, as tomorrow is a holiday.
